ONE GLASS MORE.

Stay, mortal, stay! nor heedless thus
Thy sure destruction seal;
Within that cup there lurke a curse,
Which all who drink shall feel.

Disease and death, forever nigh,
Stand ready at the door,
And eager wait to hear the cry
Of "Give me one glass more."

Go view the prisoners' gloomy cells;
There sin and misery scan;
Gaze, gaze upon these earthly hells,
In drink their woes began.

Of yonder children, bathed in tears,
Ask, why is mother poor?
They'll whisper in thy startled ears,
'Twas father's "One glass more."

Stay, mortal, stay! repent, return,
Reflect upon thy fate;
The poisonous draught forever spurn;
Spurn, spurn it, ere too late!

Oh, fly the horrid grog-shop, then
Nor linger at the door,
Lest thou, perchance, should'st sip again
The treacherous "One glass more."

Trust not to thy deceitful heart;
The Saviour's grace implore;
Through Him from every sin depart,
And touch that glass no more.

THE AGE.

[The following essay, composed by Miss Linnie Sangree, of McConnellstown, this county, was read at the Teacher's Institute, on Thursday evening, Dec. 23d, 1869.]

How the people cry it down; yet the people make the age. There is something wrong. Where? What? Woman's Rights! Now don't shrug your shoulders impatiently, at the prospect of a tedious lecture; that is not my subject, and I don't propose to say much about it; but it belongs to the age. There are two ultraists in opposition to this question. One who knows very little, the other who is supposed to know a great deal. The former would have the world at a standstill; the old time customs and prejudices cling to them like a sort of incubus. The believe the days when the girls wore linsey-woolsey dresses, and sat behind the spinning-wheels; who had no ambition, beyond marrying one of the sturdy youths—no matter whether his education consisted only of Dillworth's Spelling-Book and English Reader—they believe that to have been the golden age; the era of peace and contentment. They are terrified, sink into positive nothing, in contemplating the onward march of those pioneer women. They read little and give no reason for their antipathy, save, "It is not as it used to be"! Again, there are those—so-called great men, those learned men; men who are the first to propose a "toast to fair women," men who are loudest in their praise of the angel woman; but who are silent, when it comes to the practical use of dollars and cents—that is, rewarding her financially, the same as man for the same service. Men who are clamorous in their appeals to keep the tender feet of woman from off the highway of public life; but who forget that in the by-ways, the deserted corners, are women to be found, whom these men with all their theory could not well call the angel woman, and yet they are women, just such as it possible for any woman to become, weighed down by change, and a series of disastrous circumstances. Woman, who, had their education not been so superficial, who, had they been trained to be active workers, instead of mere adorning appendages, would never have fallen to such depths. These men are prolific of reasons who Woman's Rights should not be tolerated. "Woman is apotheosized, she is a star, a flower, a thing of beauty, and men lift their weary eyes, and bless God that the vision is real and can be theirs. But take them from this eminence, allow them to tread the jagged and jutted path that men do, and the glory of the Ideal woman, is palled in the grey mist of the sordid." This sort of reasoning sounds very beautiful; a budget of magnificent nothings. These men are the last to recognize the fact, that the only way to rescue the helpless, desolate, poverty-stricken woman from the thousand perils that beset her, or to prevent her from becoming an object of pity—is to educate her mentally, morally and physically, to think, reason and act for herself; should she be thrown on her own resources, I am afraid too, that these men make their high tribute to woman a cloak to hide their real feelings. I may err in this; I trust I do. Yet I cannot help wondering whether there be not neath all, a little selfishness? They have held the field of intellect so long, they doubt whether they can grant more than a corner to their sisters. They have so long thought woman a dear, little plastic creature, they cannot bear the idea of stepping off the hight of supremacy.—They are willing she should stand on the border-line of the world of Profession and Literature, but not on the arena, not as peers, not as aspirants, not as workers with them; they have their apprehensions too, that the princely domination of man's intellect may lose some of its exceeding brightness. There are enough of household loving woman; there will always be enough. If there are energetic, enterprising, self-dependent girls who do not see fit to lose their individuality, who don't think marriage the "one thing needful," why, let them alone; they are girls who defy misfortune.—Again, there are few women having happy homes, or anticipating a happy wedded life—who are extremists in this question. But after all, it's the the novelty of the thing Those who denounce it may be more bitter still in their denouncements; the moderate woman, may oppose it to the last, but she will move on with the movement, and if the day is won, what woman will withhold her vote? "This is an age of inconstancy; no honor, no truth," etc. Now, I don't exactly credit this; I believe the age acquiring just that philanthropic perfection it should. That is, loving a great many a greate deal. I believe in this; I don't believe in the love that holds itself in solitude, when the first object dies, or is lost. There are jewels all over the earth, if taken to us, would brighten our lives. I have my distinctions. There is a difference in temperaments. I am only excusing those whom the world brands as inconstant; beings who cannot exist without some one to love and caress; who in the absence of one loved object, find another; whose hearts o'erflow with genuine affection; who feel like taking all humanity in their great arms, and whom I believe to be truer, more loyal to every one they profess to love, than those grim, reticent, storical models of propriety, are to their one; who love once, an ideal—but marry the actual, and live without love at all. I have sympathy, but no patience with broken hearted people,—that is, who are dead as far as love and happiness are concerned. It was never intended that man or woman should die of unrequited love. The world is full of loving hearts, ready to respond. There is beauty and sunshine enough to flood every life with happiness. For every good, every joy, every love taken from us, some other good, and joy and love is given us in return; surer, deeper, more abiding, if we would only think so. What if our ideals do fail, our idols fall, our dreams fade! What if the ashes of the old do lie before us? Can we not have higher ideals, rear more symmetrical fabrics, dream sweeter, more exquisite dreams? There are flowers all around, if we would but part the weeds; there are stars ever above us, if we would but look through the mist.

"This is a fast age; that is, there are more avenues to sin. Granted; but there are also more paths to goodness. The distinction between right and wrong is so broad that if we sin, we we sin deliberately. The road to error is visible in so many different ways that we must be blindly perverse, not to see it. True, there is a valley of sin unseen, where thousands daily, hourly, throng; and the voyage to those purple-stained fields is deeper, darker, more terrible in its blackness, because made in the light of knowledge; because sophistry must be employed to combat the convictions of truth; because the angel flashes the flaming sword of light all around us. Sin perhaps is not more universal, but more glaring Yet is not this consciousness of the reign of sin, this recognition of error,—a single gleam from the better future? Is it not a veil, through which with our imperfect vision, we see the coming period, perfected by the changes and evolutions of progress?

Then there is Fashion, ever on the rack of censure. "The styles are ridiculous." Just as though the dress of the present age were not that of a century ago, reproduced in a more or less moderate mode. Yet our great,-great grand-fathers and mothers, were all sensible people. The human must have change. Monotony in anything becomes insipid. I notice that those who are loudest in denouncing the fashions are generally careless in their habits, careless of their person, and who have little taste for the delicate and beautiful. I notice too, that those wise men—who pay much attention to the head, little to the wardrobe; who are eternally deploring the shallowness of woman as displayed in her love of dress, who condemn it to the world as profoundly weak, & superficial—if they see a woman they love, clothed in ordinary, with little taste, little regard to outward adornment, the ideal woman fades, and with it generally, the ardor and enthusiasm of their love; like a beautiful work of art—they may weep over the cost, but adore the effect. Women love beautiful things, and men, spite of their much taking, love them too.—What the world calls frivolities, after all, fall over our lives, like ripples of sunshine, causing much of its brightness.

There are a host of other things, condemned as belonging to the age. But it is not the actions in themselves that should be censured it is discrimination and moderation we need. Is it not the fault of home education? Are not the parents in part responsible for the errors of the present day? Are there not young men and women who should be children still? Again, some who will ever remain children as far as actual discipline is concerned?—Knowledge is a great thing, a glorious thing; knowledge of the right kind, is everything. But there is too much advice given to the world, not enough of example at home. Are children taught to discriminate between the highest sense of right and wrong? Is the highway of life shown to them as it is,—jagged, jutted and tortuous, with patches of sunlight, here and there a paradise? Are they taught to believe that neither their will, strength and honor, nor the love and care of their parents, can save them from the evils, the perils, the temptations that lie all along the path of existence? Naught but a trust in the Infinite. That there is no tower of safety, save the Omnipotent? Are they taught to reverence the holy, the good, and true? Are they taught to hate sin in all its forms that can alone bring real sorrow? To love the light, which though crossed by black lines, can alone lead to true happiness? Do parents see that their children have proper books and amusements? That the imagination has not impure food? That they are not given to a series of peccadillos, that so often form the border land to the farstretching plain of indiscriminate vice and sin? Parents so often in observing the speedy ruin of their children, deplore the necessity that sent them from home so early in life, when, if they but knew it, the corner-stone to their career was laid at home, the heart prepared by silent, unseen sin, for the subsequent depravity—Hence, the powerful reasons that home influence should be of the present character. Teachers are some what responsible for the morals of the age. I have often thought, a teacher should devote half an hour at least, every day, in preparing the hearts, as well as the heads of the pupils for future usefulness. The words and counsel of a teacher, kindly, earnestly, prayerfully given, are never forgotten. They will be, at least to those who have had no home culture—a star towards which impelled by an irresistible power, they ever turn.

There is danger too, in misguided Ambition. It is not a rare thing now-a-days. Every school boy has his ambition, and it is not an ignoble one; every youth has his aspirations, and they are not mediocral. This is well, this belongs to a progressive age. But there is danger in wrong-directed ambition, ambition that renders the heart callous and selfish, that has for its axis—self; that leads man to say, "I am ready to help a brother, so long as it takes nothing from the purple of my robe." Ambition that leads to false opinions; that causes the greatest minds to adopt theories as visionary as dreams, to build their eternal future on fabrics as unstable as temples of sand; to seek mystery that ends in night; that leads them to form a God and religion of their own, that will not conflict with the earth—earthy. Ambition that in spite of sense and knowledge, ever holds the bat-wing of error before them. Ambition that leads them into a host of isms, and clogies, anything, anyway to happiness and Heaven but the truest, surest and shortest way—the Gospel.

There is another evil, Practicalism, that has seized the minds of individuals like gory night-mare. As a great, black current, it sweeps all in its onward flow; none rise above it. We have ideals enough, but all in our day-dreams. We have poetry enough, but always written and sung about; always in the unreal. The world might be a succession of paradises; we might see life, and in rain-bow hues; but ever looking through the brown mist of the practical, even the beautiful becomes frightful in its reality.

Again I say, there is something wrong, but that wrong is not in the energy, the enterprise, the changes, the events, the progress that characterize the age. It is not that the times do not suit the people, but that the heads and hearts of the people, are not trained to suit the times.

A PEABODY ROMANCE.

The fact that the late George Peabody died, as he had lived, unmarried, has given rise to innumerable speculations and anecdotes concerning the cause of his remaining single. It is generally believed that at one time he was on the point of marrying Miss Burdett Coutts, an alliance that, in a financial point of view, would have been a very natural one. But here is not the only name with which that of the millionaire philanthropist has been associated, and now we have still another suggested. For the following romantic story a Providence paper is responsible:

More than thirty years ago, in the far-famed school of the prince of teachers, John Kingsbury, was one of the fairest of all the fair daughters of Providence, celebrated far and nigh, as that city has ever been for its lovely girls. Her school education finished, she went with friends to Europe, not, however, before having given her youthful affections to a young man whom she had met in a sister city.—But before marriage had consummated their happiness adversity came upon him, and he found himself in no situation to marry. He was not willing she should waste her youth and glorious beauty in waiting through long years for the day to come when he could call her his own, so he released her from her vows, and they parted, she going, as I said before, to Europe. There she met George Peabody, then, comparatively speaking, a young man, but one who was already making his mark, and whose wealth was beginning to pour in on every side. He saw her and was struck (as who that ever saw her was not?) with her grace, her winning ways, her exceeding loveliness, and, after a while, he proposed. Her heart still clung to her loved one across the wide Atlantic, but after some time she yielded, perhaps to the wishes of her friends, perhaps to the promptings of worldly ambition, who can tell? Who can fathom the heart of a young and beautiful maiden? She became the young and affianced wife of Mr. Peabody. After a little interval she came back to this country, and soon after her arrival, met her first love, and after events justify me in saying, her "only love." At sight of him, all her former affection came back, if, indeed, it had ever left her, and Mr. Peabody, with his wealth and brilliant prospects, faded away, and she clung with fond affection to her American lover, and was willing to share a moderate income with the chosen of her heart. All was told to Mr. Peabody, and he, with that manliness that characterized his every action, gave her up, and in due time she was married and settled in a city not more than three hundred miles from Providence. What she suffered in coming to a final conclusion was known to but few. Her fair cheeks lost their roundness, and grew wan and pale, her lovely eyes had a mournful wistfulness that touched every heart. Some blamed her, others praised her. Those who were ambitious of worldly honors pronounced her "mad," "foolish," to throw over a man like George Peabody, whose ever increasing wealth would bestow every luxury upon her, and place her in a position in London that would make her lot an envied one, to marry a man who might never have more than a limited income to live upon. Others, and shall I say the nobler part? justified her in thinking that love, true love, was more to be desired than wealth or earthly fame. The painful conflict was at length ended. Her true womanhood vindicated itself, and she wavered no more. I well remember, when in London, twenty eight years ago, hearing all this talked over in a chosen circle by American friends, and also at a brilliant dinner party given by General Cass, in Versailles, it was thoroughly discussed in all its length and breadth. Whether, in his visit to this country, Mr. Peabody ever met his once affianced bride, I can not say, neither do I know whether, when she heard of his more princely wealth, her heart ever gave a sigh at the thought, "all this might have been mine." After several years of wedded bliss, death took her husband from her side, when the glorious loveliness of her youth had ripened into the full luxuriance of perfect matronhood.

ANOTHER MINING HORROR.

HAZLETON, Dec. 18—A terrible mining accident occurred this morning at 5 o'clock, at the village of Stockton, near this place. At the hour named the community was startled from slumber by a loud noise, caused by the caving in of slope No. 1, of Linderman & Skeer's coal mine. Upon parties hurrying to the scene it was discovered that two double dwelling houses, Nos. 3, 4, 5 and 6 had been carried down with the enormous masses of earth that filled the shaft and tunnel.

Stockton is a small village, situated on the Hazelton branch of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, two miles distant from Hazelton. It contains many neatly built houses and other buildings, the company's stores and the hotel being the principal structures The company employs about twelve hundred miners, who make this their home. The mine runs parallel with the railroad track through the middle of the village. About fifty feet above the place of this morning's accident the mine caved in some years ago; but no danger of its happening again has since been apprehended. About ten years ago a small hole was made by the falling of the earth directly in front of the two ill-fated houses.

The residents of houses Nos. 3 and 4, Mr. Philip Wetheran, his family and boarders, and the family of Mr. Wm. Morrist and boarders, were saved from a terrible death by a singular circumstance. A dog belonging to Mr. Morrist awoke the family by its persistent howling and barking. One of the men rose for the purpose of ascertaining what ailed the animal, when he discovered that the house was sinking.—He immediately gave the alarm, and the two families had barely time to escape. Miss Mary Wetheran, running in the wrong direction, fell into the abyss, but was subsequently rescued by some courageous young men. She is somewhat bruised and prostrated from excitement, but will recover.

All of the residents of houses Nos. 5 and 6 lie hopelessly buried in the ruins. They comprise Mr. Schwenck, his wife, a son of nineteen years, a daughter of eighteen years, a son of eight years and an infant. This comprised one family. The other consisted of Mr. Isaac Ranch, his mother, wife and infant. This makes a total of ten persons. It is reported that some men were in the mine at the time of the accident, and if so all are undoubtedly dead. But the report is very doubtful and cannot be traced to any reliable authority. So far it has been found impossible to reach the dead bodies of the victims. The cave is seventy five feet wide and sixty feet deep, and as the stoves in the houses set fire to the wood work the entire cavity is now a burning and smoking mass. The Pioneer No. 1, fire engine of Hazelton was soon on the ground, and made every exertion to extinguish the fire, in the hope that some of the persons in the cave might be saved. There was not, however, the faintest probability of any being alive one hour after the accident took place, as all were buried by the fallen earth with frightful effect

Trains are running from Hazelton every hour to the scene of the disaster, and will continue to do so until all the bodies are recovered, which will be some time yet, as it is still dangerous to enter on the work of rescue because of the earth still continuing to fall in and thus enlarge the cavity continually

The excitement is very great and is increasing. Families in the vicinity are moving out of their houses, fearing that theirs will fall in next. It is the general opinion other houses will fall in. There is also danger of the mines taking fire. Messrs. Linderman and Skeer arrived at the scene of the disaster this afternoon. They are sparing no pains to secure the bodies as speedily as possible.

HAZELTON, Dec. 21.—Last night the bodies of Mr. Eaton, Mr. Baker, Mrs. Swink and her daughter were recovered and brought from the mine. The head of Mrs. Swink was crushed and burned to a crisp. Her body and the remains of the other victims were literally crushed to a jelly. It is supposed Mr. Swink and his two sons had started to leave the house when the alarm was felt, and were caught between the first and second floors when the house went down.

THE Public Debt statement for the present month will show about as much decrease as last month—about $7,500,000.

NEARLY full returns of the Mississippi election show a majority of 63,000 for General Alcorn, the Republican candidate for Governor.

IT is proposed to pay the pension of invalid soldiers monthly instead of quarterly, and to protect them from the imposition of claim agents. This should be done by all means.

THE British Government is about to send one of her ablest Diplomatists to Washington to co-operate with Mr. Thornton, in the negotiation and settlement of the Alabama claims.

The total expenses of the Ways and Means Committee in pursuing their investigations in various parts of the country during the Congressional recess, were $5,772, instead of $50,000, as alleged.

EDWIN M. STANTON'S commission as Associate Judge of the Supreme Court was signed by the President several hours after his death. The document was sent by a special messenger to his widow.

SENOR ROMERO, during the civil war the Mexican Minister at Washington, recently made a speech in which he authoritatively stated that Gen. Grant was, at the close of our own war, in favor of driving the French out of Mexico by a resort to force.

JOHN CHINAMAN is the butt of Democratic contempt and persecution in California. A Democratic Senator named Lawrence has introduced a bill into the State Legislature, which obliges persons who employ any Chinese to take out a quarterly license; $2 for the first quarter; $10 for the second; and $20 for each quarter thereafter.—Comment is unnecessary.

COMMISSIONER DELANO has received information of enormous frauds committed by Ohio distillers. It is said that a single firm has cheated the government out of the tax on one million of dollars, the profits on the operations of a single year; and that not more than half the enormous quantity of liquors manufactured in Cincinnati has paid the tax imposed by acts of Congress. It is strongly suspected that there are still other extensive frauds, and a thorough investigation is to be made.

THE planters of Georgia represent that the negroes are perfectly contented. The average wages earned this year by a full hand, after pay ing his board, clothing, etc., has been from a bale to a bale and a half of cotton, or from $100 to $150 in cash, where he has been working for a share of the crop, and about a hundred in clear money where he has worked for monthly wages. The most of the negroes, instead of saving, spend their money for ‡gaudy dresses, jewelry, banjos, etc.

A GOOD indication of the vigorous efforts which are being made to collect the internal revenue tax on spirits is afforded by the large number of whisky cases which are tried in the U. S. Courts; and as the prosecutions are almost invariably sustained, it is evident that illicit distilling has become a dangerous and difficult business—The result of the trial of the assailants of Detective Brooks, in Philadelphia, and the intelligence furnished from time to time of the employment of United States troops to assist the revenue officials in ruffianly districts, afford additional proof that the power of the Whisky Ring is rapidly waning, and in the end it must, like all other defiant enemies of the American people, be thoroughly conquered and subdued.

☞Our next Legislature will have this political phase: Senate—Republicans, 19; Democrats, 14, with two claimants to the seat in the Twentieth District. House — Republicans, 60; Democrats, 40. The political complexion of the Legislature of Ohio is in the Senate, Democrats, 18; Republicans, 16; Reformers, 2; vacancy, 1. In the House, Democrats, 54; Republicans, 52; Reformers, 5. On strict party issues it is believed there will be a tie vote.

GOOD SUGGESTION.—The Berks and Schuylkill Journal recommends, as a sweeping reform, that the office of State Treasurership be made elective, by a constitutional provision—that the salary be raised to $5000, and that a law be passed by which the State shall receive the benefit of the interest or bonus of the money not in actual use. If this is done, the formation of corrupt "Rings," as far as State Treasurer is concerned, will be "played out."

☞The beginning of the year is a very good time for everybody to square up—we hope to receive calls from everybody indebted to us. It takes money to keep our machinery running.

Congress.

Several of the Republican papers of this Congressional District have already opened up the Congressional nomination question. Hon. Samuel Calvin of Hollidaysburg, and Hon. D. J. Morrell, of Johnstown, have been named. There will be other candidates. The guerrillas are taking a hand to have the nomination fixed up to suit their purposes—if they fail, they will again unite with the Democrats to defeat the Republican nominee. The guerrilla organ, the Republican, says that "Huntingdon county Republicans [meaning the guerrillas,] must be treated as the equals of any other Republicans in the district. Any other course would inevitably prove suicidal." A little too fresh, Mr. Cremer, to dictate to the Republican party who should and who should not be nominated. Some of the Democrats you helped to elect are just now taking their seats at Harrisburg, and others are "in place" in the county, where Republicans should be, and would have been had you and your guerrilla friends not sold out to the Democrats. You want to be the equals of any other Republicans in the district, after acting the shameful part you did last fall in defeating as good Republicans [and soldiers, too,] as there are in the county. The equals of true Republicans? You have more impudence than we supposed you had. If conduct such as your faction was guilty of during the late campaign can be made respectable—can be overlooked by the Republican party—then party organization and party nominations will not be worth anything next fall. The nominee for Congress must be a man in no way connected with the guerrilla faction of this county—must be a man true to the Republican party and its nominees—no other would be worthy or could receive the Republican vote.

☞"Bad Lewis and 'wo' have got quite sociable. We have got so close to him that we can whisper in his ear and keep him 'all right' as long as the kraut lasts; and next fall a 'little pile' will make him all right for any one who needs his support."—Guerrilla Republican.

Have got quite sociable? That's news to us. No, no, Mr. Cremer, you need not expect that we can go backwards and be politically sociable with guerrillas. We know the "posish" of such characters—we know their political standing in the county, and we can't be influenced to be politically sociable with them. We played Andy Johnson once—that will do for the balance of our life, and by the time you get back into good standing with the Republican party you will agree with us that playing disorganizer is a hard road to travel. The "little pile" argument may be your politics; it never has influenced us for or against any man or any party. The evidence is against you. If you can fool any of your guerrilla office seeking friends to approach us with a "little pile," send them along and we will receive and distribute it in presents to the children and send you a dish of our prime kraut in the bargain.

MORE LEGAL BRUTALITY.—Another bungling job at hanging is on record; this time in Indiana. On Friday last Oliver A. Morgan paid the severest penalty known to the law, for murder. Like a number of other cases that we have noticed, there was the horrible scene of a scuffle on the scaffold, and the still more horrible spectacle of deputy sheriffs pulling the wretch up and down through the trap, dangling on a rope too slack to let out his life. Such inexcusable carelessness is as disgraceful as it is disgusting; and the only way apparently to put a stop to it is either to hold sheriffs and their deputies to a strict accountability, abolish capital punishment altogether, or have each State appoint a scientific hangman, who will attend to this business without feeling in the matter, and will know how to do it, in as decent and orderly a way as possible. So many have been put to death in the manner described, that this course of treatment is beginning to be considered by the masses a sort of legal brutality.

☞Adam Titus, the murderer of Henry Stahm, was hung at Carlisle, on the 22d ult., at 1½ o'clock. The Sheriff read his dying speech in which he again confessed he had committed the murder, and said that his bad and passionate temper impelled him to committ the crime. In concluding he said:

May you all take warning from my fate, and strive to control your tempers, for my bad, excitable temper has brought mó where I now stand.

I bid you all farewell—and may God bless you—and may the Lord Jesus Christ receive my soul—Amen!

☞The United States Senate has started up a hunt for the leak whence flow their proceedings in secret session. The sage Senators can not find it, and they propose sending the Vice President up to the sky-light to find out the mouse that has stole its way into the lion's trap. We think he might as well journey to the moon.

PA. LEGISLATURE.—The Legislature meets to-day, Tuesday, and Harrisburg is full of Members and office-seekers. This district is represented by Democrats elected by Cremer and his guerrilla friends. That's glory enough for the guerrillas and Democrats.

Death of Ex-Secretary Stanton.

Ex-Secretary Stanton died early on Friday morning, the 24th ult. Since the assassination of President Lincoln nothing has so startled the country as the death of Mr. Stanton. When first announced in Washington City, no one believed it, and it was only after the sad report was investigated by every one, that conviction forced itself upon all that the American Carnot had gone forever from among mortals. He had been in better health this fall than for three years past, having got nearly free from the asthma which troubled him so much, and was so greatly improved by his visit North, last summer, that he felt as though he would regain his health, which had been wrecked by so long and incessant mental strain in the War Department, but he had miscalculated his strength. He was too near worn out to recover.

The doctor pronounces the fatal disease congestion of the heart; that Stanton was so weak from his long illness and recent attack of dropsy that, when taken with the fainting spell at midnight, he was left so weak that he could not rally to resist the congestion that had set in, and the life of the greatest man that the late war developed flickered out as a dying candle, leaving his family in the room of darkness. Dark, indeed, for them, for beyond the house in which they live there is not a dollar of property left to feed, clothe or educate the children.

Early on Friday morning the death of Mr Stanton was communicated to President Grant, who about noon, caused the following order to be issued:

Department of State, Washington, D. C, Dec 24, 1869.—The following announcement of the death of Hon. Edwin M. Stanton is published by direction of the President.

Executive Mansion, Washington, D. C., Dec. 24, 1869.—The painful duty devolves upon the President of announcing to the people of the United States the death of one of its most distinguished and faithful servants, the Hon. Edwin M. Stanton, which occurred in this city at an early hour this morning. He was distinguished in the councils of the nation, during the entire period of its recent struggle for national existence, first as Attorney General, then as Secretary of War.—He was unceasing in his labors, earnest and fearless in the assumption of the responsibilities necessary to his country's success, respected by all good men, and feared by wrongdoers. In his death the Bar, the Bench, and the Nation sustain a great loss, which will be mourned by all.

As a mark of respect to his memory, it is ordered that the Executive Mansion and the several departments at Washington be draped in mourning, and that all business be suspended on the day of the funeral.

U. S GRANT.

IMPORTANT DECISION.—The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has decided [Judge Sharswood delivering the opinion] that a mortgager or a purchaser at sheriff's sale is not bound to look beyond the judgment docket to ascertain whether the entries thereon are properly made by authority, and that where there is any defective entry of a judgment, or an unauthorized entry of satisfaction, the prothonotary is liable to damages to the party injured. Hence where the prothonotary, without the authority of the court, entered on his docket against a judgment, satisfied on fi fa., it was held that the entry was perfectly regular and conclusive as to third persons to whom the judgment itself, regularly docketed, was constructive notice, and that it was not necessary to search further and ascertain whether there was any record of an order of the court directing such satisfaction.

ANOTHER CHURCH UNION.—The (German) Reformed General Synod has been holding a protracted session in Philadelphia, under the presidency of Prof. E. V. Gerhart. The question of union with the (Dutch) Reformed Church came up for discussion, and was referred to a committee. The recent dropping of the distinctive titles, "German" and "Dutch," leave two denominations with the same name, Government and principles; except that the late Dutch Church has affiliated more than the German with other denominations. The main discussion was on the question of liturgy, which now distracts the church. Permission was granted to use a new liturgy; though a resolution forbidding its use, except on the vote of the several congregations, was rejected. The Reformed Church reports three synods, thirty-one classes. 521 ministers, 1,179 congregations, 117,900 members, 7,968 confirmations, 49,960 Sunday scholars, and $76,433 religious contributions.

A SAD CHRISTMAS.—On Christmas morning Mr. Benj. Penrose, a respected citizen of Drumor township, Lancaster county, awoke about 2 o'clock, struck a light, and on seeing what time it was, called to his wife a "Merry Christmas" several times but received no response. A daughter sleeping in an adjoining room, asked why her mother did not answer, and, on going to the bedside with a light it was found that she was dead and partially cold. Mrs. Penrose was about fifty-five years of age. She had been unwell for some months, but on retiring on Friday she expressed herself as feeling better than for some time past.

☞South Carolina and Massachusetts are the two States of the Union that now stand on a specie paying basis. The former State gives official notice that interest on her State debt, falling due January 1st, will be paid in gold coin, either at the State Treasury or at the financial agency in New York. Massachusetts has maintained the honorable distinction through and since the war of being a specie paying State.

It is understood that Mr. Stanton left his family very little property beside the house he lived in.

Hon. Horatio Seymour had his shoulder dislocated by being thrown from his carriage, at Utica, N. Y., on Wednesday.

The New York Board of Health report that there are 20,000 tenement houses in that city and that 700,000 of its inhabitants live in them.

A Man in a Quicksand.

A singular accident, and one that caused the greatest excitement in the quiet town of Winchester, occurred on Monday. A man named Wing has been employed a few days past in repairing or rebuilding a well upon the premises of Mr. Cameron. Monday he was at work about thirty feet below the surface, at the bottom of the well, laying brick, which the well was to be built. He is a man weighing over two hundred pounds, of large frame. He was standing in the water and sand at the bottom, and insensibly to himself, gradually sank until he discovered that his feet and legs, nearly to the knees, were imbedded in a quicksand. He made repeated attempts to move, but found that he was stuck fast. Those at work at the mouth of the well were informed of the fact, and the rope was fastened about him and attempts made to pull him out by the aid of the windlass at the top They were unable to move him at all, and the pain to him was so acute that they were compelled to desist. Ropes were then arranged so arranged that he should not sink any deeper, and attemps were made to dig him out. The well being small, and Mr. Wing very large, no one could get inside the brick work to assist him, and he has been compelled to do all the digging himself with pails, or cups, passing them as he filled them to some one above. The sand constantly filled in as he dug it out, and in this condition he remained all the night. Refreshments and stimulants were sent down to him, and he was alive and in as good spirits next morning as a man could be expected to be under such circumstances. A colored man worked in the well eight hours Monday night, assisting the unfortunate man to extricate himself. At about 3 o'clock the fire bells of the town were rung, and in that way a relief was obtained for the men who had been at work and on watch at the well during the night.

With daylight the men renewed their efforts with vigor, occasionally pausing to speak an encouraging word to the poor victim. The first train to Boston bore a gentleman in quest of some professional miners, who might possibly suggest some quick method of release. On their arrival at the scene of operation these gentlemen immediately ordered some piles to be driven about him, in order that the adhesive and contracting properties of the tediment might meet with some resistance. This was partly accomplished, when it was found that one leg of Mr. Wing was getting loose, and after some boring with long augurs, and a constant pulling upward of the entire body by means of the windlass above, the limb was cleared, amid much cheering from the crowd who surrounded the well at the imminent risk not only of meeting a fate similar to that of the man whom they were endeavoring to rescue, but also of breaking their necks. This was at 11 o'clock. The wood driven into the clay so relieved the pressure upon Mr. Wing's body that one hour and a half later he was pulled up and placed on terra firma, though in a very exhausted condition. He was instantly conveyed to Mr. Cameron's house, and Dr. Windsor and Mr. Cameron endeavored to restore the benumbed limbs Fortunately, the well water, though intensely cold, had not the slightest particle of frost in it, else very serious consequences would have followed even a short confinement. He is now doing well, and the physicians apprehend no serious injury from his incarceration of twenty-one and half hours. The citizens exerted themselves to the utmost to rescue Mr. Wing, and every fresh idea brought forward during the weary work found plenty of willing hands ready to take hold. The brick work around the bottom of the well and also the curbing were torn to pieces in the frantic endeavors of the workmen to save the life of the unfortunate man.—Boston Journal, Dec. 22d, 1869.

☞There has just been finished and presented to Mrs. President Grant a beautiful, chaste and elegant memorial, unique in character and design, the handiwork of Mrs. Fries, of Washington. The shape of the memorial is oval, about eight inches in height, handsomely framed in gilt, and the design is a tomb with a weeping willow drooping over it. The tombstone is of pearl, bearing on it the word "Mother." The willow tree is correctly formed, and is composed entirely of the hair of Mr. and Mrs Dent, Mrs. Grant's father and mother. The memorial is a work of art, and exhibits great skill.

THE ECLIPSES OF 1870.—During this year there will be six eclipses—four of the sun and two of the moon. Of the two herein mentioned the first will be a total eclipse of the moon on January 16-17, which will be invisible in the United States, but perfectly visible at Greenwich, England The second will be a partial eclipse of the sun, also here invisible, and visible only to the regions within thirty degrees of the South Pole. It occurs on January 31. The next eclipse, visible in this latitude, will be a partial one of the moon on January 6, 1870.

Vincent Colyer, on Wednesday, presented to the President a memorial from merchants and other residents of British Columbia, asking to be annexed to the United States. The President informed Mr. Colyer on Thursday, that he had read the memorial with great interest, and sent it to the Secretary of State. Senator Sumner, Chairman of the Foreign Committee, also read the memorial and is reported to have said that "the movement could have but one termination."

LOCAL & PERSONAL.

☞A Happy Year, (1870) to all.

☞ The first letter from "Veritas" has been received, but it came too late for insertion this week.

☞ Ladies' Furs and Shawls, Alone and Boys' Hats and Caps, at Family prices, at HENRY & Co's. [2t

☞ The Methodist Church commenced a revival of religion a week ago. There are a number of penitents.

☞ Sale of household goods at the residence of M. E. Rudolph, rear of Court House, at 10 o'clock, A. M., on Thursday, 6th inst. The house is offered for rent. *

SWOOPE'S SALOON, located in the Diamond, is the place to get Oysters, and other luxuries. Ice Cream, which, by the way, is par excellent, furnished every Tuesday and Saturday evening.

☞ Tight pants, it is said, are going out of fashion. For the sake of those young men who show thin legs and big feet, but who will follow fashion if it does make them hideous, we hope it is true.

☞ We direct attention to the advertisement of the sale of valuable real estate and personal property, by Jas E. Robb, in Porter township, on Friday, January 14, 1870. This is one of the best farming lands in the county.

☞ Mrs. R. N. Stearns, a trance speaker, gave two discourses in the Court House, on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings last. Her remarks were well received by the audience, which was respectably large.

☞ A series of temperance meetings in this county, has commenced — The first was held last Friday evening at Cottage P. O., and was addressed by J. R. Simpson, Esq , and others. The sense of our people on this subject has been taken, and they are a unit in favor of a speedy reform.

☞ Mr. James Bricker, of this place, held the office of Whisky Inspector for several months, and was pronounced one of the best, if not the best, officers in the district. He has been removed —because he would not work with the guerrilla faction against the Republican organization.

BEARS SHOT.—Three bears, a mother and her cubs, were shot on Stone mountain, one day last week, by Mr. John Carmon, and two other hunters, from this place.

Mr. John Warfel, of Henderson twp , also shot one of the "varmints," on the same mountain, the same week.

☞ The Harrisburg Telegraph, a good Republican paper, and one that keeps us posted in Legislative matters, appeared on the 1st of January, 1870, in a new dress. We admire it for its neatness, ability, and the steadily increasing enterprise it manifests, and hope it may long live to enjoy its prosperity.

THE New Year was the occasion, as usual, of many good resolutions of amendment by those who felt that they were not as good as they should be; some tobacco-chewers and smokers resolved that they would dispense with the weed and thereby save their cash, and a few liquor drinkers resolved to do likewise. We hope all who made good resolutions will have moral strength enough to abide by them.

☞ Under the familiar head of "Married" we publish an extended list of notices. It is unnecessary to refer attention to them, for we know that nine out of ten of our readers will look at that department the first. Altho it is not customary among country editors to "puff" when no greenback accompanies the notice, still we must for the sake of humanity and Biblical injunctions, wish one and all of them a long, happy and prosperous life.

☞ Harry C. Schaeffer, Chief Engineer of the Harrisburg Fire Department, died suddenly about 3 o'clock on the morning of the 30th. He went to bed the night previous at his usual hour, in apparently excellent health and spirits. His wife awoke at about half-past two and found him in great pain, and he died soon afterwards, without being able to speak The term of office of the deceased would have expired on Monday, when his re-election was considered a certainty.

A Surprise.

A robber created quite a scare at the Farmers' Hotel in this place on Friday night last. He got into the room occupied by the domestics, and while there examining the bureaus he awoke one of the girls who gave a deafening scream, which made him scamper and awoke the boarders.—The thief stole nothing very valuable. Suspicion rests upon two men named Charles Lee and Charles ——, who had been boarding at the hotel about a week, but who vamoosed before daylight on Saturday morning.

☞ Almanacs for 1870 for sale at Lewis' Book Store. Either German or English.

CARRIER'S ADDRESS

To the Friends and Patrons of "The Globe."

JANUARY 1, 1870.

Awake! arise, from slumbering beds,
And wash your faces, comb your heads,
Draw on your boots, jump in your pants,
And rush, with all the blandishments,
That tailors lend, into the street
Prepared to get your New Year's treat.

Fair maiden, throw your night-cap high,
And open up your pretty eye,
And twist your hair in many a curl,
And all your silken sails unfurl;
Put on your cheek a ruddy glow
With drippings from the virgin snow;
Throw on the robes which silkworms wove
And merchants brought from spicy grove;
Attired thus in good bootee,
Come in the street and list to me.

No organ, with a crank, have I,
Nor monkey with a playful eye,
Nor tambourine with tinkling bell,
With which to please your fancy well.
A simple poet sings his lay
And scatters verses by the way.
He prompts your gentle heart to treat
And makes you shake your tiny feet.
Dear calico—with beauty crowned,
How I would like to move around
And pour sweet ditties in your ear,
This youngest morning of the year,
Until your eyes would showers leak,
And pour in torrents down your cheek,
Enough to turn a saw-mill wheel
Or make a puddle for an eel.

But maiden, with the ruby lip,
Whose nectar I would love to sip,
And see myself in your blue eye,
The brightest star in beauty's sky,
I must not waste my precious time,
By hanging round this crinoline.

Now, Susy, "don't you cry for me,"
For I must sing my New Year's glee;
Don't burst your waistband with your grief,
For I can furnish no relief;
Dry up your tears, compose your heart,
For down the street I now must start:
So woman with the watery eye,
I'll bid you now a short good-bye.

I see great throngs of people here,
Delighted with the new born year.
The happy swain, with kid-gloved hand,
Supported by his light rattan,
Is bowing to his Sarah Jane,
And twisting like a weather-vane,
As Sarah sends a winning glance,
Or turns her azure eye askance.

Oh, Johnny—hold your beating heart—
She wants to smash your vital part,
And make a whiskered, mighty man,
Obey the beckon of her hand.
Your eagle eyes keep opened wide,
As you are walking by her side,
Or your soft heart will stick like wax,
To that huge pile of moving sacks.

The shifting scene presents a view
Not altogether rare or new.
Young men and women, girls and boys
Are eating sugar-candy toys.
Huge roosters melt upon the tongue,
With things that must remain unsung—
While ginger cakes, and pretzels too,
With lager beer, are lost to view.

How happy you are, all—and gay,
While moving up and down the way,
As though "spondoolicks" were as flush
As torrents that from hill-sides gush.
Right glad am I, your pocket-books
Present such soul-enticing looks;
For ere the shades of evening come,
I do expect to pick out some
Nice quarters from their hiding place,
And to my pocket gently trace.

Now, patrons, I could longer sing,
And make the upper heavens ring
With notes so varied, rare and rich,
That Gabriel might his trumpet pitch,
From frontal parapet on high,
Down, through the clear cerulean sky,
And say to me: Young man of song,
My silver trumpet take along
Where e'or you go; for I must own
I ne'er have listened to a tone
So sweet as thine, since morning light
First broke upon Arch-angel's sight.

Fair maiden, whom I left in tears,
"Cunflumixed" much, 'mid hopes and fears,
I have a pile of greasy "dust,"
That I'll lay up, where moth nor rust,
Nor nothing else, shall e'er invade,
The treasures, I have this day made,
Until I need them. Then, Susy you
Can have a portion of them, too.

THE CARRIER.

The Holidays.

The holidays were appropriately observed by our citizens of all classes, ages and sizes. The number of presents given and received were fully up to the number in past years, and the merriment of the season was as great as heretofore. The "Bell snickles" were out, with their false faces and the noisiest kind of instruments; and the lads and lasses made their calls in their best bib and tucker. Every one appeared happy, and especially the children, who called early on Christmas morning, as usual, for their presents. The greatest crowd wended their way to the Red Front to receive their package of sweetmeats, and went away with joyous countenances.

On Christmas eve the Methodist church was filled with children, and a happy time was spent in singing the well-learned and familiar hymns. On Christmas evening a large number of valuable presents were distributed to the children from a well-laden Christmas tree. The scene was a pleasant one, and should be renewed on every such holiday, as nothing tends more to the children's enjoyment and happiness than the reception of some token of remembrance from their parents or friends.

☞ The Teachers' Institute was well attended during its session in this place. The exercises were greatly relieved of their scholasticism by the singing of the pupils of the Cassville Orphans' School. We happened to see one exercise taught by Mrs. Shoemaker, and we thought many of the teachers would have a sorry time in teaching their pupils how to bob their heads, if their first experiment was to be the standard.

As we were not furnished by the Secretary with the report of the proceedings and the number of teachers who did attend, we can not give particulars.

☞ Among the teachers in the Hollidaysburg Seminary are graduates from seven different institutes of learning.

Country Editors.

Country editors, of whom we are one, are not city editors, by any means; nor would we exchange boots or chairs with any such, although they do live in big houses, have princely sanctums, eat fat turkeys, and sport broadcloth. We are poor but proud; and live in a frame, a corner for a sanctum, a box for a desk, eat sour-kraut and sport in shoddy. City editors can write their column a day, but we will steal their best tit bits and laugh at their calamity; they can poke their fun and big words at us, but we will grin and bear it, and mock when their fear cometh. They can sit up all night and write a leader on the latest sensation and make a hullabalioo about the last scandal, while we, who can tell as much and more about our neighbors, will keep quiet and hope that our heroes and heroines in imagination will read the dailies and draw the application for themselves and save our minds the trouble and our hide the cow-hide castigation. City editors can copy our locals, on which we spend our best "licks," and never give us credit; we don't care so they keep mum when we steal from them. They can send around their prospectuses, and blow about their large circulation, and try to steal our subscribers; but when it comes to publishing home matters, such as who has the biggest hog, the best cabbage, the finest wheat, who was elected town constable, and who died and who got married, the home markets, etc., etc., why we have got 'em. They won't do it, and we will, and there is the big difference. We are humble and won't try to stick our weak weekly productions and uninteresting locals under the nose of well-informed city readers who learn so much from ye highly educated city inkslingers. We are independent and don't care a picayune for city patronage so far as readers are concerned; but why it is that those city chaps will send away up in the country to steal our subscribers, we can't tell. How often does a man living in the country throw aside his county paper to take up a city one. And is it all because the man who gets up that city paper wears a stove pipe hat and smokes 10 cent cigars? We would just like to know; because if it was, we would soon not care a cent for expenses but would spend our last bottom dollar but what we would do likewise. City editors "aint got no" business throwing their trash under our people's noses, and our people "aint got no" business saying they can't subscribe for a county paper when they pay five times as much for the city stuff And we mean just what we say, and there's an end on it!

HUNTINGDON, Dec. 31, 1869.

To our Friends and Patrons:—We congratulate you, one and all, at this the close of the year. The past year has been a busy one. Enterprise has succeeded; labor has been rewarded; business has been brisk in its various branches. Your labors have been crowned with success. Our trade has been large beyond our expectation, and we hereby tender you our warmest thanks for the uniform favor we have met at your hands, and trust that ALL have been mutually benefitted.—It is not our intention to enumerate articles. You know the kind and quality of goods we keep. If in want of goods of any kind, bargains can be had, and if we do not sell as low, if not lower, than you can purchase elsewhere, don't buy.

We again extend to one and all our warmest thanks for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon us during the past year, and wish you a "happy New Year," trusting that you may live to enjoy it.

We are very respectfully,
1t HENRY & Co.

SUDDEN DEATH.—The Rev. W. R. Mills, of the Central Pennsylvania M. E. Conference, died in York, Pa., on Sunday afternoon, the 19th ult, of apoplexy. In the morning he had occupied the pulpit, as usual, and in the afternoon attended Sabbath School, which he left for the purpose of administering the sacrament to one of the members of his church, who, to use his own language, was "near the door of heaven." The member resided several squares away from the church, and it is supposed that the sudden death which overtook his beloved pastor was brought on by over excitement and exertion. Returning from the death-bed communion, Mr. Mills was walking down street, in the direction of his home, when he was seized with a dizziness in the head and beckoned to an acquaintance to come to his assistance. He was taken to his home, and before medical aid could be obtained, expired. Mr. Mills will be remembered by many of the citizens of our county.

Week of Prayer.

Sunday, January 2d, commenced the series of religious meetings known as the "Week of Prayer," to be observed throughout the Christian world as a season of special prayer for the Divine blessing upon the cause of Christ, in its different aspects and departments of christian labor. This series of meetings, which has now grown into a permanent institution, was first appointed by the Home and Foreign Christian Alliance of Great Britain, at the request of the different missionaries in foreign lands. The subjects for conference and prayer, as marked out for each day of the week, embrace objects of deep interest to all Christians—such as "Prayer for Christian Missions in other lands," "For Civil Rulers and all in authority," "For schools and institutions of learning," "For the promotion of Christian Union among the different denominations of Christians," &c.

☞ This is the first number of THE GLOBE for the new year, and what better time to subscribe for a good county paper? We pity the man who willfully lives in ignorance of home news, and who will deprive his family of the pleasure of reading about the things of weekly occurrence, just for the sake of saving four cents a week.

Those of our subscribers who have received the paper although they know they have not paid for it, will please call during Court week and square up for the new year; and those who are not certain whether they are square or not should call and see. We are not anxious to make out bills, but these reminders will be forthcoming, when we find it necessary. We hope we will be saved the trouble.

Mill Burned.

The steam saw-mill of Mr. J. F. Steiner, adjoining this place, was destroyed by fire on Monday night, with all its machinery, tools, belting, &c.—The fire broke out at about twelve o'clock, and before assistance could arrive, it was so far consumed that it was impossible to save anything. It is supposed to have originated from a spark from the smoke stack. The depth of snow which fell on Saturday greatly aided the men in their efforts to save the shingle mill adjoining.—Mr. Steiner's loss is over $7,000, insured for $4,000.—Philipsburg Journal.

Agricultural Meeting.

A regular meeting of the Huntingdon Co. Agricultural Society for the purpose of choosing officers for the incoming year, and the transaction of other business of importance, will be held in the Court House on Wednesday evening of the first week of the coming court, (12th prox.) A full attendance of the members is requested as business of importance will be laid before the meeting. By order of the Society.

R. McDIVITT,
J. M. BAILEY,
Secretaries.

☞ Next week Court commences. The trial of Bohner and Bodenbourg, the murderers of the Peighbal family, will be in progress. These prisoners, during their incarceration, have manifested no uneasiness, played the guitar and sung Dutch songs, and are seemingly unconscious of the fate that awaits them.

THE PIOUS YOUTH.—We have received a copy of this publication, printed by H. R. Holsinger, at Tyrone, Pa Terms, $1,00 a year, in advance. This is a neat, useful and instructive journal, and will be found an interesting monthly visitor for the young.

☞ Photographs of Bohner and Bordenburg, the murderers of the Peighbal family for sale at Lewis' Book Store, and Donnel & Kline's Gallery. Price 25 cents.

AUCTION.—Two cook stoves, one cog wheel clothes wringer, one bedstead and other goods, will be sold at auction on the street in the diamond about one o clock on Tuesday Jan. 11th.

Farmers attending January Court would do well to call at A. R. Stewart & Co. and see the best Corn Sheller extant. 2t

LORILLARD'S "EUREKA" SMOKING TOBACCO is an excellent article of granulated Virginia; wherever introduced it is universally admired. It is put up in handsome muslin bags, in which orders for Meerchaum Pipes are daily packed.

LORILLARD'S "Yacht Club" SMOKING TOBACCO, classed by all who consume it as the "finest of all." It is made of the choicest leaf grown; it is anti-nervous in its effects, as the Nicotine has been extracted; it leaves no disagreeable taste after smoking; it is very mild, light in color and in weight, hence one pound will last as long as 3 of ordinary tobacco. In this brand we also pack orders every day for first class Meerchaum Pipes. Try it and convince yourselves it is all it claims to be, "The Finest of All."

LORILLARD'S CENTURY CHEWING TOBACCO. This brand of Fine Cut chewing tobacco has no equal or superior any where. It is without doubt the best chewing tobacco in the country.

LORILLARD'S SNUFFS have now been in general use in the United States over 110 years and still acknowledged "the best" wherever used.

If your storekeeper does not have these articles for sale, ask him to get them; they are sold by respectable jobbers almost everywhere.

Circular of prices forwarded on application.

Successes and Failures.

LOCATION.

Forcing nature to yield that which is evidently a poor return for our labor, is at best poor policy, and yet this is exactly the course many cultivators of the soil are constantly pursuing; for they cannot understand why a crop should be grown at a profit in one locality and not in another.

If a man reads in the newspapers an account of the immense profits realized by certain parties in the cultivation of any particular kind of fruit or grain, he says I can do what others have done, and to prove it he immediately commences an investigation in relation to the culture, cost, and prospective price in market; and if these appear satisfactory, he embarks in the enterprise, with every expectation of realizing a profitable return for the labor and capital invested. But with all the energy usually displayed in such cases, and with abundant capital, and a soil and climate apparently favorable, a disastrous failure may be and often is the result, in consequence of an unfavorable location. We use the word in its broadest sense, for it may apply to climate, soil, markets, or even to sections of the country where laborers cannot be obtained in sufficient numbers to do the work required.

It is true that more failures result from negligence on the part of cultivators than from other causes; still there are instances innumerable where no human precaution or care could prevent a failure after an enterprise was once begun. We have only to cite the many failures in grape culture caused by selecting an unfavorable location for the vineyard.

Farmers as well as fruit growers often make a great mistake in undertaking to grow certain crops for the purpose of competing with those men who are more favorably situated than themselves. A man who has to depend upon railroad communication must not expect to grow heavy, bulky crops like potatoes, hay, and coarse vegetables, and successfully compete with others who can send these articles to market by water. But it is not necessary that we should enlarge upon this point, for every observing man must be aware that upon location depends in a great measure the success or failure of almost any enterprise in either horticulture or agriculture; and what should these lessons teach if not that every farmer should grow those particular crops which succeed best in his locality, or, in other words, those that will return the greatest profit? Let those who are in favorable locations for growing apples continue to plant trees and extend their orchards until the markets are fully supplied. Farmers who can grow wheat successfully should never discard its culture for the sake of trying some other grain of which they know but little or nothing.

The advantage that one section of the country has over another is not half so great as many people honestly believe, but it is the adaptation of pursuits to surrounding circumstances that controls wealth or poverty.

ONLY CHRISTIANS.—John Wesley once was troubled in regard to the disposition of the various sects, and the chances of each in reference to future happiness or punishment. A dream one night transported him in his uncertain wanderings to the gates of hell.

"Are there any Roman Catholics here?" asked thoughtful Wesley.

"Yes," was the reply.

"Any Presbyterians?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"Any Congregationalists?"

"Yes."

"Any Methodists?" by way of a clincher, asked the pious Wesley.

"Yes!" to his great indignation was answered.

In the mystic way of dreams, a sudden transition—and he stood before the gates of Heaven. Improving his opportunity he again inquired:

"Are there any Roman Catholics here?"

"No," was replied.

"Any Presbyterians?"

"No."

"Any Methodists?"

"No."

"Well, then," he asked, lost in wonder, "who are inside?"

"Christians!" was the jubilant answer.
